County counsel: 'Specific Plan for CV Ranch not a contract'

THIS WELL-HEAD LOCATED on one of the Rancho Canada golf courses presents a major obstacle to owner Nick Lombardo's planned 175-room lodge. It marks one of three wells that could be contaminated if the golf course fairway in the background is sprayed with treated wastewater, according to Walter Wong, county director of environmental health. Wong's recommendation last week against spraying near the wells stalled Lombardo's negotiations with the Carmel Sanitary District for a sewer connection that is required for his lodge project. Rancho Canada hits snag in negotiations for sewer service; Carmel prepares lawsuit

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE COUNTY HAS DROPPED "a bomb" on the negotiations for a sewer connection agreement between the Carmel Sanitary District and Rancho Canada de la Segunda, Inc.

The county Health Department advised against spraying treated wastewater on a major portion of the Rancho Canada golf courses in Carmel Valley.

The ruling immediately stalled efforts between owner Nick Lombardo and the sanitary district to reach an agreement to dispose of treated wastewater on his golf courses in exchange for a sewer connection for Lombardo's proposed 175-room lodge.

The sewer connection was a condition required by the county Board of Supervisors in August when it approved the use permit for Lombardo's lodge project.

With the backing of the county Health Department, the supervisors stated that the lodge could not be built if Lombardo failed to secure an agreement with the sanitary district for sewage disposal service.

STANLEY WORTH, PRESIDENT of the Carmel Area Coalition, said last week that his organization is delaying its consideration of a lawsuit to halt the lodge plan until the negotiations are resolved.

But the Carmel City Council is moving ahead toward a decision to file a lawsuit. City Attorney George Brehmer said last Friday that he will make a presentation to the council at its first or second meeting in October on the feasibility of a lawsuit against the county.

Each council member told this newspaper that he strongly favored a lawsuit as a last resort to halt the project. The council members were polled last month after Lombardo received approval from the supervisors to build his lodge.

MICHAEL ZAMBORY, GENERAL manager of the sanitary district, told the board of directors at its meeting Sept. 20 that Walter Wong of the county Health Department informed Lombardo last week that he cannot spray effluent on his golf courses north of the Carmel River where three wells are located.

Wong, director of environmental health, told this newspaper that his instructions to Lombardo were that wastewater shouldn't be sprayed on the golf course area

Coastline cleanup

Dear Editor:

Tourists streaming down to Saturday night festivities on Cannery Row were puzzled to see a group of 40 to 50 people standing or sitting on the sand, listening enraptured to a tall mustached man speaking rapidly and quietly and with a subdued passion.

For nearly an hour Demetrios (Nichols)—I never heard his last name—put on a show worthy of his name.

Demetrios has a will and a way, and sufficient charisma to carry 40 or 50 persons, mostly young, mostly white, but not exclusively either, along with his rhetoric. From Seaside, Marina, Monterey, Carmel, the Valley and even—believe it or not—Pebble Beach they came. And listened. And nearly wept as Demetrios' vision took over: 2,000 to 3,000 persons will be expected to fill the local beaches on Saturday, Sept. 29, to engage in a celebration of the planet, a man-to-man, individual effort to cleanup the coastline. The people he was programming Saturday were the registrars and beach coordinators for this task.

Demetrios is the symbol and spokesman for OPII, which stands for One Planet, One Purpose, an all-volunteer, non-profit organization seeking to cleanup the entire coastline of the state within five years. This is a long coastline and will take considerable effort and dedication on the part of a lot of people. If everyone could hear Demetrios, nearly everyone, regardless of age or sex, would come to share in this vast and beautiful undertaking.

Participants are asked to register at either the Sea Scout House, at the bottom of Wharf No. 2 (parking area and Rogue restaurant) or at the Rio Road shopping center, from 8:30 to 10 a.m. Saturday. With cooperation of Ford Ord and Coast Guard personnel and equipment, the clean up will encompass recycling and sand-sifting for broken glass as well. Susan Nolan of Del Rey Oaks is the local chairman.

"Yes, it's a clean up job," said Demetrios. "But mostly, it's an effort to return one day of energy—our energy—to the earth. All of us working together as brothers and sisters can create a new, clean shoreline, a new realization of our responsibility to our mother, our planet, our earth."

It is my private hope that this display of goodwill and desire to improve our environment will at least persuade people not to drop their beer cans and soft drink bottles wherever they happen to be when they are emptied, whether on the streets of our towns or on a beach.

Prefers traffic jam

Dear Editor:

More and more we hear about the Hatton Canyon freeway and I suspect that it may be built someday.

As big hotels, multi-hundred residential complexes and more shopping centers are authorized in Carmel Valley, the strain on Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road will become even worse than it is now.

The freeway will ease today's traffic jams, with its necessary overpasses in the lower Valley. The construction of the proposed new road at Canada de la Segunda, with its overpasses, and of the overpasses at the Farm Center will also ease our traffic problems.

I drive Highway 1 daily between Valley Way and Rio Road and it is rare that I do not spend most of my time cussing. A recent president of the United States told us that cussing may not solve a problem but it sure makes one feel better! I would rather drive Highway 1 and continue to cuss than to see any overpasses in the Valley, no matter how worse things may become in the future.

A few months ago, Councilman Brunn said: "Let the traffic stack up as far south as Big Sur." Amen, friend Howard! I add: "Let it also stack up in the other direction as far as Gigling, even if I'm in the middle of it!"

Supervisor Sam Farr recently suggested that the right-of-way of the Hatton Canyon freeway be converted to a walking path. Sometimes I disagree with Sam, but this idea of his is about as good as Howard's.

Rancho Canada hits snag in negotiations for sewer service; Carmel prepares lawsuit unless the three wells are shut down.

Lombardo said that Wong's ruling "puts a cap on the amount of water we can use." But he contended that the remaining golf course area south of the river could utilize enough wastewater to make an agreement viable.

"It would be the same amount of water that Cypress Point golf course uses," Lombardo said. "We're moving toward an agreement that is mutually acceptable. There is no problem."

Zambory told the directors of the sanitary district, however, that Wong's ruling would eliminate two-thirds of the water disposal capacity that had been planned for Rancho Canada.

'The main thing is getting rid of the sewage. They've (Rancho Canada) got to get the sewer connection or they won't proceed with the project.'

THE SANITARY DISTRICT wants to spray 335 million gallons of treated wastewater per year on the golf courses in the Del Monte Forest and Carmel Valley as part of its areawide reclamation project.

But instead of the 450,000 gallons per day it hoped to use on the Rancho Canada golf courses, the sanitary district would be able to dispose of only 150,000 gallons, according to Wong's ruling. Zambory called it "a bomb dropped on us that Wong doesn't want Lombardo to use wastewater north of the river."

Wong told this newspaper that his recommendation was based on guidelines from the state Health Department. "The area they want to spray is near three wells and a lot of drinking fountains," he said.

"With the potential human contact, they have to either revamp their present system or not spray in the area. They can have a buffer zone. We've also asked that Carmel Valley Ranch not spray closer than 1,000 feet to their wells," Wong added.

He emphasized that the main issue is not the wastewater disposal. "The main thing is getting rid of the sewage. They've got to get the sewer connection or they won't proceed with the project," he said.

THERE IS ANOTHER complication in the negotiations with Lombardo. According to the draft agreement proposed by the sanitary district, the golf course owners will not be charged more for the wastewater than their present water costs if they have wells, or the going use rate if they buy from a commercial source.

In return, the sanitary distict will require the golf course owners to construct the storage and distribution pipes on their property. The sanitary district will allow the costs of the installations to be amortized through the fees for the wastewater.

Lombardo uses his own wells for his irrigation supply, and his water costs are only for pumping and maintenance. Zambory admitted that Lombardo has pointed out that the amortization of his construction costs would be greater than the district fee for the wastewater. This could result in reduced fees that would in effect require the sanitary district to pay him to use the water.

Zambory said, "Obviously we have to sit down and toss around some more figures. It would be unacceptable for us to pay him to use the water." Lombardo would not comment on this part of the negotiations.

THE DISTRICT HAS set a self-imposed deadline of Oct. 1 to complete the agreements. The deadline was established so that the district could then apply for state and federal grant funds for the reclamation project. The agreements are necessary before the funds can be made available.

In its negotiations with the other golf courses, Zambory said that the sanitary district was waiting for a construction analysis and formula for water charges from the Del Monte Forest golf courses, which are negotiating as a bloc.

He said that they have indicated the strongest interest in reaching an agreement, mainly because their current water source is the California-American Water Company. The Del Monte Forest golf courses have had a "sweetheart" deal with Cal-Am for paying for their water, but the 50-year arrangement is due to expire next year.

Carmel Valley golf course owner rejects reclamation plan.

The sanitary district has received a flat refusal from Ed Haber, owner of the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club, to participate in the reclamation project.

Zambory said that Haber's golf course has narrow fairways close to homes that would present an obstacle to spraying wastewater nearby.

Haber, like Lombardo, has his own wells, although he isn't under the same pressure as Lombardo to negotiate an agreement in exchange for a sewer connection.

An afternoon of bridge and canasta was enjoyed by 52 women, Aug. 29 in the Flight Road home of Kathryn Walker at the monthly St. Dunstan's Benefit Bridge and Canasta Party. Co-hostesses were Ruth Francis and Dorothy Gonzenback.

Because Mrs. Walker recently returned from an Alaskan trip, the usual August theme of golden hills was combined with an Eskimo motif in the placemats, candy cups and dessert.

Winners of the table prizes which came from Alaska were Irma Bolgard, Lucille Hammel, Carlyle Mothersill, Mary Young, Ruth Jones, Novella Nicolson, Dorothy Gonzenback, Alice Broberg, Vera Bautz, Helga White, Nellie Mirani, Vera Stokes and Bertha Starkweather. THE TENNIS COURTS as seen from Carmel Valley Road and a clubhouse are the only existing construction on the Carmel Valley Ranch, the largest planned development in the Valley. The developer must commit over $3 million toward road improvements in exchange for the additional construction of 500 condominium units, 100-unit hotel and golf course. Opponents, however, have questioned whether the Specific Plan guarantees a vested right for the 500 units. The dispute will have to be resolved by the Board of Supervisors before the proposed Carmel Valley Master Plan is adopted. (Steve Hellman photo)

'Specific Plan for Carmel Valley Ranch project a county plan, not a contract'--county counsel

By STEVE HELLMAN

CONTRACTS ARE ABOUT to be drawn up that will require the developers of Carmel Valley Ranch to provide more than $3 million in contributions for road improvements.

The subdivision agreement, subdivision map and off-site agreement between Monterey County and the developers, Landmark Lands Company of Oklahoma, were scheduled for final approval by the Board of Supervisors at its meeting last Tuesday, Sept. 25.

The agreements are based on the Specific Plan that has been approved for 500 condominium units, a 100-unit hotel and a golf course.

However, project opponents have claimed, in recent weeks, that the Specific Plan was not intended to guarantee the developer all of the 500 units.

A tentative map was approved by the supervisors earlier this year for 140 condominium units. This month, the planning commission granted design approval for the construction of the first phase of 80 units along with the $1 million on-site wastewater treatment facility.

OPPONENTS INSIST THAT the remaining 360 units should not be guaranteed to Carmel Valley Ranch in the proposed Carmel Valley Master Plan revision.

The revised Master Plan, scheduled to be adopted soon, allocates 500 units to the developers of Carmel Valley Ranch. Opponents maintain that Landmark Lands Company should compete with other developments for its remaining 360 units under the Master Plan quota allocation and point system.

This issue will be resolved either by the planning commission, which is scheduled to vote on the Master Plan on Oct. 10, or the supervisors, who

Horse drugging law a flop so far

By LUCY SMITHSON

IN 1971, THE STATE of California recognized that the public has an interest in horse shows, competitions and public sales and passed a consumer protection law regulating the use of drugs to alter the performance of horses. Although 30 states which have racing commissions regulate the use of drugs in race horses, and although the American Horse Shows Association and the American Quarter Horse Association have their own anti-drug programs, California and Florida are the only two states in the nation to have such laws and to administer their own enforcement programs against the illegal drugging of horses in horse shows.

In California, every horse entered in a recognized horse show pays an enforcement fee to support the activities of the state Bureau of Animal Health, a division of the state Food and Drug Department. This fee is most often $1, although it can be as high as $4 for Paint horses showing before four judges for quadruple points or as low as 20 cents for 4-H Club Play Days.

However, it has been apparent to everyone connected with the horse show world that the 1971 law has done little to solve the problems of illegal drugging of horses in horse shows. Some people say the problem today is greater than it was eight years ago.

It would seem that the law as written is not very enforceable. Also, the disciplinary measures pursued under that law take a very long time to put into effect. Furthermore, the budget allocations of the Bureau of Animal Health and the policies it employs in enforcement of the law have come under fire from many sides.

TO ADDRESS these problems, the California Horse Council organized a seminar held at the University of California at Davis on the subject of illegal drugs. The California Horse Council was organized in 1974 to marshall the horse industry of the most populous "horse state" in America into solving its own problems before government action abridged that right. It has assumed a leadership role in matters of land use, zoning, regulation of horses, planning for state and national parks and recreation areas and equine health. The council is composed of representatives of many horsemen's associations, show groups, industry and government. Representatives of these groups also attended this conference.

It has been thoroughly communicated to the California Horse Council that the majority of exhibitors in horse shows want an effective anti-drugging program. The need for funds is recognized: funds to cover more sample collection and better sample collection, funds for research to stay ahead of unscrupulous trainers some of whom are willing to use every trick in the book, and funds to coordinate with other testing organizations such as American Quarter Horse Association.

It was to protect honest exhibitors and to protect the health of the horse that this conference on illegal drugging was called. And it was purposely scheduled to convene less than a week in advance of the meeting of the Citizen's Advisory Committee on Illegal Drugging which is the official input group to the California Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Animal Health.

PROFESSOR WARREN EVANS of the Department of Animal Husbandry at UC Davis, who acted as conference coordinator for the California Horse Council, noted, "We would not have today's problems if we had acted earlier. At this conference we hope to recommend to sanctioning horse show bodies some effective regulations to prevent offending exhibitors from competing."

Flying out from Washington, D.C. to address the conference, Rich Rollap of the American Horse Council warned: "Government regulation would never have been needed if the industry itself had taken steps to address the problem." He hinted darkly of "watchdog groups" pressuring senators and congressmen to clean up horse shows on the same footing as racing. Presently parimutuel racing is governed under different laws and governing bodies which keep that sport relatively honest.

California's 1971 horse drugging act does not concern itself with Parimutuel racing although it does cover non-Parimutuel racing. It oversees horse shows, gymkhanas, competitive trail rides and public horse sales. It does not affect private treaty sales. The Bureau of Animal Health publishes a brochure listing currently prohibited drugs which may not be administered to a horse within 72 hours of competition, but the law includes a catch-all phrase to the effect that any drug which alters the performance of the horse is prohibited.

In practice, it is hard to avoid the prohibited drugs. For instance, there are 17 commercial formulations for topical furacin, a popular wound medication. Nine of those contain prohibited drugs which may be unwittingly introduced into the horse's blood stream just by treating a trailer cut. Also some drugs have quite different effects depending on dose. For example, some drugs are tranquilizers in large doses but stimulants in small doses.

Other drugs stay within the horse for an unusually long period of time. For instance, promazine sulfate may be given to a coughing horse on Tuesday. It cures his cough and he goes to a horse show on Saturday where the promazine may show up in a drug test sample. The testors have no way of knowing that the horse was not also given promazine hydrochloride (a tranquilizer) just before his performance. By the time it is assayed in the urine, it is difficult to build a legal case as to just how and when a prohibited drug was given to a horse and whether it was given ethically or not.

IN ORDER TO GET around this problem, the California Drug law allows trainers to make a "72-hour declaration" as to what drugs may show up in a drug sample. Some trainers routinely declare drugs which they have not given their horses "just in case." This complicates the work of the testing laboratory as they look for the declared drug and do not find it. Extra work is created for the chemistry lab and doubt is cast on the work of the drug program enforcers.

Also complicating things in the chemistry lab is that most samples taken at horse shows are urine samples. The head of the Bureau of Animal Health, Dr. Frank Patterson, interprets the drawing of blood samples as "the practice of a veterinarian." He stated to the conference that under the California Fair Practices Act, he would not allow a blood sample to be drawn by an animal technician unless a veterinarian were standing right there supervising the technician.

The Bureau of Animal Health does not have the funds to send veterinarians to horse shows and hiring veterinarians from private practice on a part-time basis is even more expensive. Therefore, most samples at horse shows are taken not by veterinarians, nor even by animal technicians—for which a training and licensing procedure is run by the state—but by part-time agriculture inspectors. The ag inspectors are often housewives sent to weekend horse shows with bottles on sticks. They collect urine samples—when they can. They are instructed to take samples from each horse who places first in his class and from the horse who places third. This is the Bureau of Animal Health's interpretation of "random" sampling. Sometimes the ag inspectors spend three and four hours with a single horse in an attempt to catch a urine sample. Some trainers have taken the horse out behind the barn at home and be means of a whip taught him not to let down for a bottle on a stick.

Some days we school; others we jump or do gymnastics. And Garland Park is our playground, for a leisurely trail ride or a fast conditioning trot uphill.
We're proving that a contented horse is a pleasure to own and ride. Our clean, safe, comfortable quarters and generous feedings of top-quality hay and bran, plus ready access to salt and fresh water put a bloom on your horse and keep it there.
And if you don't own a horse but long to get "back in the saddle" or perhaps take up horseback riding at last, we have a number of well-trained, reliable, privately owned horses available for long or short-term lease. Inquiries invited.

Garden talk:

Carmel Valley is strawberry country

By JERRY FOOTE

YEARS AGO I USED to go to a small fruit market in Paris where strawberries were sold—not the fat strawberries we have in California, but the cherished fraises de bois of the European countryside.

They were displayed like tiny jewels in small baskets lined with leaves, the early morning dew still on them. I have no idea who made that improbable trip into the city so early in the morning, but from the number of francs which they cost, it must have been a profitable business.

I thought of them often through the years in faraway places, but it was not until we moved to the Valley that I tried to grow them.

It began with guests from Connecticut who sent the perfect house present from the White Flower Farm there, half a dozen plants of Catherine the Great Fraises. I was delighted, but apprehensive as well. Would they acclimate to the Valley soil, lack of humidity, and the long dry season? Did they need a chill factor, that inner control in some plants which prevents it from setting fruit or flowers unless it is exposed to freezing temperature during the winter? There were lots of unknowns which went into the ground along with the plants.

UNFORTUNATELY, IT was the beginning of the drought, although neither the strawberries nor I knew it. As water grew more scarce, I gave them as much as I could, hoping they would survive.

They tried, putting out a few blooms and some small fruit. As the roots dried out they began to die, and I added them to the growing list of casualities.

Two years later, when water was plentiful again, there was no sign of them. Then, in the spring of 1979, I noticed three very small plants emerging. The leaves were unmistakable with their oval shape and serrated edges. It seemed like a miracle, but I had underestimated the plants' will to live. Their last act had been to drop the seeds which were to lie dormant in the soil for many months until they were ready to germinate.

Now I have plans for edging a whole border with the graceful plants. They multiply rapidly, although they do not put out runners like other strawberries. Every other spring I plan to divide them until the border is finished, a marvel of beauty and utility!

IT IS A FAR CRY from the small fraises to the enormous commercial strawberry production in Monterey County. In 1978, there were 3,685 acres in production; 66,040 tons of berries were grown with a value of $38,000,000! This is truly strawberry country, where a Valley family can count on a good harvest from a small patch. Two dozen plants should provide an equal number of quarts for eating, jam and freezing.

Strawberries do have definite requirements; sandy, well-drained soil, a pH of no more than 7.5, a good water supply, no salt buildup in the soil, a good mulch, and regular fertilizing with nitrogen.

In our heavy adobe soil I have found it necessary to incorporate a lot of manure and compost in the fall in order to have a light, salt-free bed ready for spring planting. Fall planting is also a good idea here because the plants establish a good root system during the mild winter and are ready to bear early in the spring. Local nurseries will be offering plants for sale during October.

As far as varieties are concerned, the most popular ones are Tioga and Sequoia, both of which have good track records. I plan to try some of the newer ones such as Aiko, Tufts and Toro for purposes of comparison.

I HAVE TRIED TWO types of mulch, both of which work well. Pine chips are clean, easily obtained and do not interfere with watering. Plastic mulch keeps the earth warm, keeps down weeds, and keeps the fruit clean. Right now we are using strips from an old solar blanket originally bought for the pool. The main drawback with the plastic is that it interferes with the formation of the daughter plants from the runners. It works best with raised bed planting and furrow irrigation.

Whatever the growing methods or the varieties used, it is important not to use plants more than three years. By then the quality and size of the fruit are diminished and the chances of disease are greater. Also, beware of using fertilizers with sodium content as it will aggravate salt buildup, a condition very injurious to the fruit.

I have a dream for 1980. It is a jar of homemade strawberry jam, made from our berries with a dash of juice from our Meyer lemon and sweetened with honey from our hive. It is a beautiful color of rose, fragrant and delicious on a piece of salt-rising bread toast. Now, there is a dream worth having—and eating!

will grant final approval for the 20-year plan.

ERNIE VOSSLER, PRESIDENT of Landmark Lands Company, was asked last week if he would continue with the project if it were limited to 140 units, especially in light of the $3 million commitment he must make to the county.

"I don't ask those kinds of questions," Vossler said. "We'll just keep complying and fulfilling 100 percent of our side of the commitment.

"Whether we get 140 units or 360 units cannot be asked. The county staff will be fair. The board will be fair. It'll all work out in the end.

"I have faith in the whole system," he said.

DEPUTY COUNTY COUNSEL Jose Ramos confirmed last week that the commitment to the Specific Plan for Carmel Valley Ranch is a matter of "equity."

He said it is a question of how much the developer can expect, and, conversely, how much the county must guarantee with the Specific Plan.

"The developer might say he's got a commitment from the county because he's relied on 500 units in the plan," Ramos said. "That may be true. The developer claims to have spent $1 million on the reliance of the Specific Plan.

"But it (the Specific Plan) is the county's plan. It is purely a legislative act passed by the Board of Supervisors. It is not a contract."

There is no legal precedent that gives the developer the right to a number of units set forth in a Specific Plan, Ramos explained. "The developer doesn't have a vested right in the Specific Plan the way he would with an approved tentative map."

The proposed Master Plan revision contains an allocation of 500 units for Carmel Valley Ranch based on the Specific Plan. But Ramos asked that if the Specific Plan doesn't guarantee 500 units,

Padres to open league football season Oct. 6

THE CARMEL HIGH School Padres football team was on the practice field last week preparing for the new league season after an uncertain start because of a simmering controversy over athletic fees.

Coaches were predicting as much as a 50-percent drop in player turnout after the board of education proposed last month a $75-per-player-per-sport fee. The after-school athletics program has drawn a normal number of students since the fee was reduced to $25 earlier this month.

Football coach John Whittaker said last week, "The squad is just about up to what it was last year. We've got 36 players on the varsity team, which is normal."

Whittaker said there were 11 veterans returning. The rest of the varsity team is comprised of players who performed on the sophomore/freshman team last year.

Only six team members, however, have paid the $25 fee, according to high school vice principal Joe Feldeisen. These players paid the initial $75 fee, then were refunded the difference when the fee was lowered. All players will have to pay the $25 fee by the first league game, Oct. 6.

DEADLINES HAVE BEEN set for collecting fees for each sport instead of making the fees due immediately, he said, since some players may decide not to stay on the team. Volleyball will present no problem because of a heavy turnout, he said. Feldeisen said of the football team: "They play two games before the first league game. By then they should know if they want to stick with the sport."

Feldeisen said the $75 fee "stalled" the sports program because "some kids decided to work instead of going out for sports. Then the fee was lowered, but they already had a job."

If enough students sign up for the sophomore/freshman squad, then it will be split into two teams, a junior varsity for the sophomores and a freshman squad. A junior varsity this year would allow playing time for both the sophomores and freshmen.

THE PADRES GO into the season without four seniors who led them last year to fourth place in the Mission Trails League.

Tom Larson and Mike Harney, all-league linemen, and Bruce Robinson, an all-league tight end, have graduated and are now starting players for Monterey Peninsula College. The Padres also lost star quarterback John Lucido to graduation.

Lucido led the Padres last year to wins over Hollister and Pacific Grove, the two teams that placed in the three-way tie Gonzales for first place. The Padres placed just behind the deadlocked teams.

'Specific Plan for CV Ranch not a contract'

then what would be the basis for a guaranteed allocation in the Master Plan? The Master Plan can be revised with any proposed allocation system, Ramos said.

WOULD THE DEVELOPER'S contract with the county for $3 million in road improvements provide a vested interest?

"This is a question of equity," Ramos said. "The developer can claim reliance on the Specific Plan, for example, if he is laying out a lot of bucks for the development of 140 units, and the investment won't be covered unless he gets all 500 units. Then there could be an issue of reliance."

Ramos said that two months ago he would have argued steadfastly that the developer had no legal basis to rely on the Specific Plan for the units. However, in the interim, he said the developer has raised the issue of reliance, specifically in light of the financial commitments to the county.

According to Ramos, the developer reportedly said that if he couldn't rely on the Specific Plan, then the county would be unable to expect anyone to "go the route" of a Specific Plan.

"It's a crucial point in an uncertain area of the law," Ramos said. "I wouldn't want to go into court on this.

"I don't think he has a legal right to rely on the Specific Plan as though it were a contract. It boils down to what's fair," he said.

ACCORDING TO MO Orrett, supervising civil engineer of the county Public Works Department, the $2.1 million subdivision agreement and the $1 million off-site agreement were drawn up to conform with the conditions of the Specific Plan.

The $1 million off-site agreement requires the developer to provide:

- One-third of the cost of the construction of a "proper" intersection at Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads.
- Seventeen percent of the cost of widening Carmel Valley Road to four lanes from Via Petra to Robinson Canyon Road.

Approval to rebuild Tantamount Theatre appealed

A neighbor of Francois Martin has appealed a decision by the Monterey County Planning Commission granting a use permit to rebuild his once-popular Tantamount Theatre in Carmel Valley.

The appeal, filed on behalf of Martha Cooper Lang by Salinas attorney Nick Kraushaar, seeks to halt the rebuilding on the basis that the theater is a non-conforming use and should require a rezoning.

The county Board of Supervisors has scheduled a public hearing on the appeal for Tuesday, Oct. 16, at 2 p.m.

Meanwhile, Martin's associate, Rene Sonne, reported Monday that the copper and brass eagle sculpture that stood in front of the burned-out theater was stolen last week.

The figure, donated to Martin by Hidden Valley artist Rick Moraski, was valued at $4,000. Sonne said the thieves apparently used bolt cutters to take the six-foot-tall sculpture. "It was a clean job. We have no idea who did it."

The Tantamount Theatre was destroyed by a fire last October after Martin had operated it for 20 years as a showplace for old movies, puppet shows and occasional stage productions.

Some neighbors opposed the reconstruction, fearing that the 144-seat theater might become a busy commercial venture. But Martin was granted a use permit Aug. 29 by the planning commission after it was decided the theater could operate as a non-conforming use for not more than three nights per week.

Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos determined that less than two-thirds of the non-conforming use was destroyed by the fire, and therefore Martin was entitled to rebuild without rezoning the residential property.

Kraushaar said that he will question Ramos' decision, which he insisted was wrongly based on the county assessor's valuation of the theater after the fire.

"Our contention is that they (the county) should have counted the conforming use, the residence, also. The only thing that burned was the entire theater," Kraushaar said. He said Martin is required according to law to apply for a rezoning.

Zoning Administrator Bob Slimmon indicated at the initial hearing in July that it would be nearly impossible to rezone the property for commercial use for the theater. The property is in a residential area.

Asked if his client simply didn't want the theater rebuilt, Kraushaar said, "Mrs. Lang is not sure who is behind the rebuilding. We've never had any objection to Francois Martin, but he is too old and his health is too bad for him to participate."

The planning commission granted the use permit with the understanding that the theater would return to only its former use, but Kraushaar said the use permit technically doesn't constrain the type of operation. "They could show adult movies," he said.

Sonne said, "They (Lang) are just trying to kill us. It's costing us money every day we don't rebuild. We were getting ready to lay the foundation. We've got to get a shell up before the rains."

Sonne said that he doubted that other neighbors had joined in Lang's action.

Padres to open football league season on Oct. 6

"WE'VE GOT A YOUNG team," said fullback Mike Odello. "There are fewer people to start with, and the players are smaller and not as quick."

But Odello said the team "has more unity and spirit" then last year. The 17-year-old senior will be the captain of the Padres this season.

Odello scored the first touchdown in the Padres' 20-6 win last Saturday over Morro Bay. The 6-0, 185-pound fullback went on to rush for 123 yards in the second non-league game of the season.

OFFENSIVE RIGHT GUARD Curtis Vout, a junior, also plays defense as an outside linebacker. Vout played well in both positions in the 20-6 win over Morro Bay last Saturday.

In their opening game against Monterey High, the Padres lost 34-6. Coach Frank Lynch said the inexperience of the team was a major factor in the loss against the bigger and faster Monterey High.

Halfback Joe Araujo ran for 108 yards in the win over Morro bay. The quick 5-9, 155-pound senior also scored the Padres' second touchdown on a 60-yard run.

The other halfback, Harry Lewis, blocked a punt that was recovered by teammate Jeff Grace, who ran the ball in for the Padres third touchdown.

Padres quarterback, Dean Turner, completed only one of 10 passes against Morro Bay. Lynch said four of the passes should have been caught. Turner, a 5-9, 160-pound senior, played as a defensive back last year.

The offensive line is led by right tackle Mike Matson, a 6-2, 120-pound senior. At right guard is Eric Smith, a 6-0, 195-pound senior. Smith, who also plays defensive end, explained how he felt when the trustees passed the $75 fee.

"It freaked me out," he said. "I knew I was going to play one way or the other. But I knew a lot of guys who wouldn't, especially when they don't get credit." A fee cannot be charged for classes that are offered for credit. Academic credit is not given for after-school sports, which allowed the trustees to charge a fee.

SMITH POINTED OUT that it already costs each player as much as $75 to purchase his cleats, mouthpiece, two game jerseys and insurance.

The first league game Oct. 6 against Robert Louis Stevenson School of Pebble Beach is a home contest for the Padres.

There are now eight teams in the Mission Trails League; Carmel, Pacific Grove, Robert Louis Stevenson, North County, Palma, Hollister, King City and Gonzales.

REMEMBER WHEN?

From the "Carmel Valley Outlook," Oct. 1, 1969

FIREFIGHTERS PREPARE FOR FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

No fires occurred in Carmel Valley this past week. That's a good way to get ready for Fire Prevention Week which begins Sunday. The Monterey Peninsula Fire Prevention Officers Association will host the third annual kick-off program on Cannery Row in Monterey. Last year, the Carmel Valley Fire Department won the trophy—and it's hoping to keep it this year.

SKYDIVING AND GOLF MERGE

Skydiving and golf hardly go hand in hand on the sports field, but they will be united Saturday at the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club for the first time.

In a unique "shotgun start" of the fifth annual Quail Invitational, four Monterey Peninsula members of the United States Parachute Association will perform their sport for golfers and sightseers alike.

Carmel Valley resident Norman Heaton, executive director of the USPA will participate in the jump.

BANDITS "STIRRUP" TROUBLE

Last week, the Village was paid a visit by a couple of bandits. Unfortunately, bartender Angus John Kinkade was alone at the Stirrup Club. While he was cleaning up, two men entered—one of whom was armed with a .45. "Stop cleaning and cool it," they told Kinkade. One man watched the door, and the other took money from the cash register. Then, he pointed to the small safe and ordered Kinkade to open it. After gathering up $525 in cash, the bandit cut telephone wires and told Kinkade to go outside. The two robbers made off with the take and haven't been found, as yet.

The wine connoisseur

Today's best Chardonnay buys are from California's vineyards

By Robert Lawrence Balzer

THERE IS STRIVING for perfection with the golden, white wine grape of Burgundy, and often, it seems, an almost perfect Chardonnay is here. But by whose standards? Ah, there's the rub.

A few years ago, when the eminent Mme. Lalou Bize-Leroy of Meursault was in California, she tasted a full complement of the California Chardonnays then in prominent favor. She had brought with her, from undeniably the highest echelons of Burgundian wine strata, that experienced palate which had endowed her with not only the post of quality control director for the Domaine de la Romanee-Conti, but the prestigious firm of negociant-eleveur, Leroy, half-owners also of the great Domaine.

Her tasting reactions would be most significant. How did she like them?

SHE PREFERRED THE Hanzell 1974, but found the '74 Chateu Montelena "le plus pres de notre" (the most like their own). Her ideal in memory index? Possibly the Meursault-Perrieres 1969 or 1966.

Most of the California wines, to her taste, were too much fruit or too much wood. The subtle balance of both is needed for that softly poetic concept of "the perfect Chardonnay."

At the Los Angeles County Fair, as a wine judge, we recently had an opportunity to taste some 50 entries in this presently popular white wine category. And as reported here, there were two gold medals awarded, one to Chateau St. Jean 1977 Alexander Valley Chardonnay Robert Young Vineyard, and to the newly emerging Milano Winery for the 1978 Mendocino Chardonnay. The two wines were both outstanding, but widely different in character.

If memory serves, the Chateau St. Jean Chardonnay was round in the mouth, of a straw-golden color, from French oak, with a clean, dry, long and full-flavored finish.

The Milano Mendocino wine was more pronounced of varietal grape character, less complex, but clean, dry and crisp.

Our panel of four judges agreed both were worthy of gold medal designation. At the time of the tasting, of course, we had no notion of where the wines had come from.

IN THE LAST WEEK, we've had an opportunity to taste two more good California Chardonnay wines, from two different growing regions, a Beringer 1977 Estate Bottled Napa Valley Chardonnay and the Zaca Mesa 1977 Chardonnay from Chapel and Toyon Vineyards of the Zaca Mesa Ranch in Santa Barbara County ($5.75).

Tasted together, the regional differences, and possibly the younger age of the Zaca Mesa vines, could account for a rather green, almost acrid taste of the latter wine, with a slight haze obscuring its brilliance, which time might settle out.

Time, or the lack of it, robbed the wine of its fair run toward perfection, in the vineyard and in the winery. Not enough time in oak, to our taste, and release before initial awkwardness could be softened.

THE BERINGER WINE, by Myron Nightingale, has a brilliant yellow-gold appearance, and the oak element of bouquet is the first impression from a bouquet which leads on deeper into the grape's own varietal complexity.

In the cool southern region of the Napa Valley, each block from two separate vineyards was planted only as the grapes reached optimum ripeness. This, in Prof. Harold Olmo's distinguished monograph on Chardonnay, is the crucial beginning for "the perfect Chardonnay."

He says: "There is very little in the way of distinct flavor, in either the grape or the new wine until the fruit is almost overripe. Even experienced tasters cannot pinpoint any mark of varietal distinctness in the usual wines of high acidity. However, it is exactly this delicacy and cleanness of taste that makes the variety an excellent base for champagne and a delight to the connoisseur. In matured wines of the highest quality there is often an exquisite aroma of ripe apples or of ripe peaches, but who can document it?

Ripe fruit, almost overripe, seems to be the undeniable lead to greatness. It set apart the Beringer-Nightingale wine above. It was also the greatness of the Chateau Montelena Chardonnay of our memory and the favor of Mme. Bize-Leroy.

WE HAD AN OPPORTUNITY to taste the Robert Mondavi 1973 Napa Valley Chardonnay not too long ago, and immediately wished we could have shared it with Mme. Bize-Leroy. It was as close to the "perfect round" as any Meursault-Perrieres of our memory. It is wrong, if one is seeking after perfection, to taste any of our fine California Chardonnays until after their fourth birthday.

The bigger and better wines will only reach their greatness after a minimum of five years. This is the reason for cool, dark cellars, for aging.

That California vintners have surpassed many of the producers of French White Burgundies with Chardonnay (Pinot Chardonnay, as we've frequently stated here, is an erroneous name for the same grape or wine) is owed to our advances in technology and equipment. Prof. Olmo underscores this factor: "(California) winemakers are aware that the Chardonnay can be easily tainted, requiring extra care in the cleanliness of all equipment in its handling and transfer."

IN THE IMPECCABLE cleanliness of our wineries, the newness of their equipment and equally impeccable vineyard disciplines, we have possibly outdistanced many French growers.

Perfection is not easily attained. It is costly in not only labor and equipment but personal investment. Such wines are inevitably expensive, but from the point of view of value, the best buys today in Chardonnay are from California vineyards. Properly cellared they can equate or surpass the most noble titles of France.

The Carmel resident is a member of the Hartnell College Music Department and a graduate of the Yale University School of Music.

Granados compositions to be performed

Pianist Lyn Bronson benefit recital Sat.

Pianist Lyn Bronson will perform rarely heard works of Spanish composer Enrique Granados Saturday, Sept. 29 in a benefit recital at Sunset Center, Carmel. The performance will begin at 8 p.m.

The Carmel pianist is a member of the Hartnell College Music Department and currently president of the Monterey County Branch of the Music Teachers Association of California. A graduate of Yale University and the Yale University School of Music, Bronson completed graduate studies at CSU Fullerton where he eventually joined the piano faculty. A former student of Artur Balsam, Bruce Hungerford and Earle C. Voorhies, he has taught at Hartnell since 1975.

The recital will include performances of Valses Poeticos and Allegro de Concierto by Enrique Granados and au bord d'une source, die Lorelei and Rigoletto Concert Paraphrase by Franz Liszt. His program will also offer the Bach-Siloti Organ Prelude in G minor, the Mozart Fantasie in D minor, the Beethoven Sonata Pathetique and the Chopin Ballade in A Flat Major.

Admission, at $4 adults and $2 for students, is tax-deductible. Tickets are available at Abinante Music, Monterey; Bartlett Music, Carmel; Lily Walker Music, Pacific Grove, and the box office on the evening of the performance.

All proceeds will be donated to the Chickering Piano Fund, a community effort to restore a grand piano now in the Robert Down Elementary School in Pacific Grove.
